

Aireona Armagon

Ms. Armagon is a dedicated advocate for senior care, currently pursuing her Doctor of Pharmacy degree at Texas Southern University College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, class of 2025. As a member of Phi Lambda Sigma and Rho Chi Honor Society, she has distinguished herself in pharmaceutical leadership and academic excellence.

For over three years, Aireona has actively contributed to ASCP, serving as student chapter president and leading initiatives to raise awareness about senior care for underserved populations, including fundraising for the Houston Walk to End Alzheimer's.

During her Paul G. Cano internship with ASCP, Aireona gained invaluable experience in policy and advocacy for senior care pharmacists and long-term care pharmacies. Her research focuses on identifying and addressing gaps in the older adult community, underscoring her dedication to improving care and medication use. Her award-winning research on diabetes and cardiovascular health in seniors, presented at Eli Lilly, further highlights her commitment to advancing healthcare in the community.

Driven by love for her grandparents and compassion for the older adult community, Aireona is dedicated to leading with quality care and innovative thinking, positioning herself as a transformative leader in pharmacy.
